Prayer Corner Steward or Owner

As she sat in the bustling airport, waiting for her flight, a woman bought a small bag of nuts to snack on. Finding a seat, she opened the bag and began enjoying them. Soon after, a young man sat down next to her. To her surprise, every time she reached into the bag for more nuts, the young man did the same. He smiled politely, but this strange behavior baffled her.

She grew increasingly frustrated. How could he be so bold? she thought. She was certain that those nuts were hers, and he was taking them without asking! The nerve! But he kept smiling, sharing the nuts without a word of complaint.

When her flight was called, she boarded the plane, still irritated by his audacity. Settling into her seat, she reached into her purse for something—and there, to her utter embarrassment, was her unopened bag of nuts. All along, she had been eating his nuts, and yet, the young man had graciously shared what was his without saying a word.

This story is a reminder of how we often view our possessions. In reality, we don't own anything—not our family, our homes, our jobs, or even our finances. God owns it all, and like the young man in the story, He graciously shares everything with us. As Psalm 24:1 says, "The earth is the Lord's, and everything in it, the world, and all who live in it."

In the beginning, God created the heavens and the earth (Genesis 1:1). He entrusted us with dominion over His creation (Genesis 1:26). Still, we must never forget that we are managers, not owners. How are we managing what God has given us? Are we, like the woman, mistakenly acting as though everything belongs to us, becoming frustrated when things don't go our way?

Being a manager means we're accountable for how we handle what's been entrusted to us. We will one day give an account to the true Owner, as 1 Corinthians 4:2 reminds us: "Now it is required that those who have been given a trust must prove faithful."

So, are you living like an owner or a steward? How well are you managing the people, resources, and opportunities that God has placed in your care? Remember, one day, we will all have to give an account of how we handled the "bags of nuts" that God so graciously allowed us to share.

Reflection:

Are you managing what God has entrusted you well, or are you acting like an owner? Let's live with the awareness that everything we have is a gift from Him, and our responsibility is to steward it faithfully.
